NEW YORK, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1888.

UNDER YELLOW JACKSSWAY

THE STRICKEN FLORIDA OTY IS STILL PLUNGED IN GLOOM.

To-Day's Conditions Thenten to Bring Another Increase in me Record of New Cases and Deaths—Fear of the Fever Has Put Town on Giard Against Town, with Arms, All Through the State.

JACESONVILLE, Sept. 21.—From e offiction of one city the sway of the vollow fever has risen to the proportions of a reign of terror all through the State, and while people are anxious to flee from whatever place is visited by the scourge, there is yet no place for them to fly to.

Camp Perry is full of refugees, Camp Mitchell not yet mady and all the towns in the State are guarded against fugitives from this place. Indeed, they are guarded against each other. The terror of the disease has become so general that cities and towns all through the State have their shotgun cordons through the State have their shotgun cordons all about their boundaries, and passage from one to another is almost entirely prohibted. The increased vigilance among the towns leads not only to serious embarrassments in business, but affects all personal and political interest in the State. Capt. Fleming's experienceahows an almost ludierous phase of the situation thus brought about. The Captain issumpting the state as the Democratic Gubernatorial candidate, and at Barnford he vas refused a ticket to another point he wished to reach because the Mayor had issued at order that a purchaser of a ticket must slow by certificate that he had resided thirty anys at his last stopping-place.

Up to the present writing to-day unofficial returns make thirty new cases since yearerday's report in this city and five more deaths. Such returns are obtained with great difficulty, and even official figures are uncertain, since many new cases, despite the vigilance of authorities, physicians and nurses are successfully concealed from notice until they have existed for a day or two. Conditions to-day threaten an increase over vesterday's record, both in new cases are greater among the blacks of the city, proportionately, than among the whites.

New nurses have arrived from various Southern points. Thirteen have come from hobile, but several of the Alabama outingent are absolutely in a state of debit of the first point are absolutely in a state of debit of the first newspaper man to fall a victim to the scourge. However, M. B. Bowden, whose death has been widely noticed, was the first newspaper man to fall a victim to the scourge. He was, up to a week before his illness, city editor of the Times. Union. He was a bright newspaper worker and a most cheerful companion. His sickness followed that of his wife and children, and its fatal result was undoubtedly dite in part to the wear and anxiety undergone while his dear ones were in peril.

A new source of fear and distrust came with the proof, by autopsy, that Hugh Grunthal, whose disease was reported to have been congestion of the lungs, really died of the fever. Because of the report of the harmless nature of his sickness, the usual precautions were omitted in his case.

A table compiled by the Times. Union shows that Nov. 18 is the earliest date on which any frost effective against the fever has appeared. Thus there is seen to be a long, long stretch of time for the death-dealing epidemic to keep up its work. It has thrived through all sorts of weather, so far, the wet and the dry, and it seems impossible to stop it until the frost does come.

ws troubles watch with much interest the Jeckson, Miss.; Montgomery, Ala.; Memphis, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., being among the latest towns where the disease is said to have appeared. The victims in these cities were refugees from here and elsewhere.

A MISSING VENEZUELAN.

William Benitz, Aged 55, Mysteriously Escapes from His Guardians.

M 188100—Witheim Benntz, of Caracas, Venezuels, since June 28, 1888, on which day he left his bearding-house, No. 8 State st. New Yore aged about 55 beight 5 feet 2 inches, ruedly complexing, abors gray hair and monatache, clad in black suit; speak Spanish and German, but little English. Any information giadly received by Bothfeed & Arnand, 78 and Broad st.

In reference to the above advertisement, which appeared in this morning's paper, Mr. Bothfield, one of the firm mentioned, said to an Evening World reporter that the missing man arrived from San Francisco on the day before he disappeared.

Benitz had been in Venezuela upwards of thirty years, and was well connected in that city. He was a sort of ne'er-do-weel, and was sent to this country two years ago by his mother. He went West, and has been rosming around the country during that time.

His mother wished him to return and notified the New York firm, through E. Heney, of Caracas, to send him home. They brought him on from San Francisco, but he arrived a day too late to catch the ship Valencia, and was placed in a boarding house. The day after he arrived he left the bouse and has not returned. He left all his clothing in his room.

Mr. Bothfeld notified the police of this city, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Hoboken, but no trace of Benitz has been found. There is no thought that he may have been the victim of foul play, as he had only a few dollars in his pockets at the time.

The J. J. Shen Association.

Notwithstanding the threatenin, weather less evening the rooms of the J. J. Shea Association, exner One Hundred and Second street and Thir avenue, were packed, it being the regular weekly meeting of the J. J. Shea Tammany Hall Cleve-land and Thurman Campaign Association, of the Twenty-third Assembly District. Addresses were made by N. H. O'Connor, J. J. Shea, the Tam-min's forminee for Alderman; J. P. Fallon and others. This association will have Civeland and Taurman meetings every Wednesday evening from now until election, the rooms of the associa-tion being thrown open to all.

Nothing Like It! Retry day swells the volume of proof that as a specific for all Hood diseases nothing equals Dr. l'irince's Golden Medical Discovery. Remember, this is an ole established remedy with a record! It has been weighed in the balance sud found fulfilling every claim! It has been tested many years in thousands of cases with flattering success? For Throat and Lung troubles, Catarrh, Rithing disease, Liver Compilant, Dyseppits, Stock Headache and all disorders resulting from impovershed blood, there is neising like Dr. Pimun's Golden Medical Discovery—world renowned and ever growing in favor!

A BANK ROBBER IN COURT.

Bank tellers and cierks crowded the rivate examination room at the Tombs this morning. They were from the Com mercial Bank, at 78 Wall street, and the Fifth National Bank, at Third avenue and Twenty-third street, and were present to make complaint against the young thief who so boldly robbed both institutions yesterday.

The young man, who gave his name as Henry T. Hardy, after his arrest by Patrolmen Burns and Nesbit, of the Old slip station, was taken to Police Headquarters this morning, where he had his picture taken for the Rogues' Gallery and was shown to all of the detectives.

None of Inspector Byrnes's men recognized him as an old offender, and they think that if he is an old hand he must hail from another city.

Hardy was present while the com plaints were drawn up, and he was identified as the robber by John Ruigen, the janitor; John P. Paterson, the por-ter, and Paying Teller Alfred S. Vanderhof, of the Fifth National Bank, and Vanderhof, of the Fifth National Bank, and William McMaster Mills, Charles G. Harri. son and Charles A. Porson, clerks of the Commercial Bank.

The affidavits were read to Hardy, and in answer to questions he said that his name was Henry F. Hardy, that he was twenty-four years old and was born in Chicago.

'I had rather not give it," was his reply to the question as to his present place of readence, and to the charge of robbery he said:

"As far as the bank, which claims to have lost $3.000, is concerned, I really know nothing about that."

He also pleaded not guilty to the robbery of the Commercial Bank, and was committed

He also pleaded not guilty to the robbery of the Commercial Bank, and was committed without bail by Police Justice Smith.

The blue flannel bag in which he carried off his booty from the Fifth National Bank, and which he dropped as he ran out of the Commercial bank, was perfectly new, of fine material and neally made.

In it was found $8,700 in five and ten dollar bills, the exact amount which Paying Teller John H. Carr said was taken from his desk.

Hardy is about 5 feet 10 inches in height, very slim, and with a smooth, pleasant face, rather cadaverous. He was neatly attired, with coat and waistcoat of small gray check, brown striped trousers and black derby hat. He wore a lady's amethyst ring on the little inger of his left hand.

Hardy's handwriting was studied with peculiar interest by the officials of the Commercial Bank, because they have lost considerably by petty forgeries in amounts of $10 and $20 recently. All of the forged checks purported to be signed by customers who were on their vacations.

Hardy's handwriting is small, angular and particularly bad, and they failed to identify it as that of the forger.

The robbery of the Fifth National Bank was accomplished at 10 a. M. yesterday. Hardy had been seen hanging about the bank corner for several days by the janitor and porter, and was seen to enter the bank by Porter Peterson. He was dressed in black at the time.

While the attention of the paying teller was distracted for a moment, Hardy stepped upon the projecting base of the counter, reached over the glass partition, seized three packages of bills, containing $1,000 each, and made his escape, dropping one of the packages at the door as he went out. This package was probably dropped as he was pushing the money into the narrow month of the bag.

It was slightly after 3 p. m. when Hardy visited the Commercial Bank at 78 Wail street. Here he snatched $8,700 as he had the $3,000 on Third avenue. Teller Carr was counting the money out. Hardy was on the opposite side of the ground-glass partition, out of sight of Mr. Carr. He jumped upon the projecting ledge of the counter, reached over, grabbed the money and ran.

One of the clerks, Wm. McMaster Mills, onnter, reached very grand ran.

One of the clerks, Wm. McMaster Mills, saw him, however, and gave chase followed by others. The bag which Hardy carried got entangled in the railing of the steps and he had to leave it behind him and seek safety in dight.

The flying robber daried into Hastings's saloon, at Maiden lane and South street, with Nesbit after him. Here more shots were fired, without effect.

Saloon-Keeper Hastings tripped Hardy and Policeman Nesbit and Officer Bemis, who had entered the front door, fell upon and second had entered the front door, fell upon and secured him.

Hardy gave as his place of residence a number in East Eighteenth street and 316 East One Hundred and Eighteenth street. At neither place is he known.

In his pocket was found a small notebook and two medical prescriptions signed "Dr. A. E. Myers," one of them made for "R. F. Seymour." One calls for a portion each of nitrate of ether, acctate of potash and tincture digitalis.

On one of the pages of the notebook is the address, "Frank Page, Sherman House," and on ano her, "M. Maurice, Clairmont." It is thought from the Sherman House, that the young man is from Chicago. Inspector Byrnes has notice of a bank robberly which occurred in Buffalo two weeks ago, exactly similar in all its details to those of yesterday. The description of the robber tallies with that of Hardy.

The $2,000 which was stolen from the Fifth National Bank has not, been recovered, and the detectives are attempting to discover its hiding place.

HIS OFFICIAL HEAD IN PERIL

Serious Charges by Two Examiners Against a Custom-House Inspector.

Surveyor Beattie's private secretary mid this morning that the investigation into the charges made by two custom's inspectors against another inspector was still going on He declined to give the accused officer's name on the ground that if the charges were proven false it would injure him in the sight of others whether he was exonerated or not. He said, however, that if the charge was sub-stantiated the official would be immediately dismissed.

The examiners who make the accusation, Brown and Donohue, say that the inspector acted in a suspicious manner while examining the baggage of J. M. Greenbaum, who arrived on the Fulda, and after he had finished they insisted on making an examination, and that then they discovered a lot of dutiable goods that had been passed, either through negligence, or with the intention of doing so.

BEDELL'S STEALINGS REACH A QUARTER OF A MILLION.

Barlow, Larocque & Chaate's Trusted Clerk in a Cell at Police Headquarters— Two Gamblers to Whom He Said He Lost Money Also Arrested - A Long Career of Decelt and Forgery Exposed.

The evils of policy gambling, against which THE EVENING WORLD has been making such a persistent and uncompromising fight, could not receive a more forcible illustration than in the case of James E. Bedell, the confidential clerk of the well-known law firm of Shipman, Barlow, Larocque & Choate, of No. 35 William street, who is now under arrest for swindling his employers out of more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Bedell had been in the employ of the firm for twenty years, and, although he received the liberal salary of $7,500 per year, his passion for this contemptible kind of gambling was so strong that he was led to rob his employers of enormous amounts of money in order to gratify his propensity for policy-playing. Owing to the position which he held in the

Owing to the position which he held in the office, the implicit confidence reposed in him by his employers, and his expert knowledge of the methods of conveyancing real estate he was enabled to conceal his fraudulent practices for a long time, in the same way that Ferdinand Ward's operations escaped detection for years, although he was bound to be found out at last.

According to all the evidence now in the possession of the police, he began his stealings about five or six years ago, when he succeeded to the post of confidential clerk to the firm, and saw the possibilities that the position oftered for raising money by these diahonest means.

He soon made a systematic practice of borrowing money on spurious mortgages, his operations becoming larger and larger from necessity, in order that he might pay the ever increasing interest on his previous transactions, the only means he had of escaping detection.

The remainder of the money he thus oband "horses" in several old-time policy-shops downtown show.

Lately he had been gambling, he says, at the policy-writing establishment run by Philip Goss and Joe Emerson at No. 180 Broadway.

Inspector Byrnes arrested both these men last night and locked them up at Police Headquarters. They were taken to the Tombs this morning and remanded by Justice Smith for a further examination.

They deny that Bedell lost any of his money there, although it seems that he was a frequent visitor at their place.

Bedeil himself is still in the hands of Inspector Byrnes, to whose custody he was Bedeil himself is still in the hands of Inspector Byrnes, to whose custedy he was committed by Police Justice White last Monday, and occupies a cell at Police Headquarters. He will be examined at the Tombs to morrow. Since his incarceration he has maintained a dogged and sullen silence.

According to Inspector Byrnes he is as sharp as chain lightning, and cannot be believed in any of the statements which he made to his employers when they found him out.

made to his employers when they found him out.

Inquiries by the Inspector's detectives have elicited the fact that Bedell has for several years past been leading a life of wild dissipation, and that he has been spending money recklessly in a career of vice that would not be believed of him by his friends. A great deal of the money he stole has been squandered away in more than one resort, and a good share of it has been spent upon fast women.

When be was first arrested and brought to Police Headquarters it is said that he was the two children, called at Police Headquarters and had an interview with the culprit in his cell.

Mrs. Bedell did not know until Wednesday what had become of her husband, for he was frequently away from his home in Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, for days at a time.
The news of his crime and imprisonment was a cruel shock to her, and the scene at the Central Office was an affecting one.

Bedell showed but little sympathy for her in her bitter grief, and when at length the poor woman went away with her child she seemed to be thoroughly heartbroken and prostrated by her grief.

The prisoner had nothing to say this morning. He is a man of medium height and rather slight build. His jet black hair and small mustache, with snarkling and restless black eyes, and complexion of an almost unnatural ballor and sallowness form a striking contrast and give him a sinister appearance.

He seemed to take pride in the fact that he had stolen more money by his fraudulent real estate transactions than any prisoner the luspector had ever had in his clutches for a similar offense, and seems to feel that as he has been caught at his tricks it would be just as well to be hung for an old sheep as a lamb.

DEATH OF WILLIAM WARREN.

WITH ONE EXCEPTION THE FOREMOST COMEDIAN OF THE AGE.

In His Time He Had Appeared in Nearly Seven Hundred Reles-He Was the Idel of Boston Theatre-tieors, and for Many Years Was a Member of the Museum Company-Nearly Seventy-Six.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. Boston, Sept. 21 .- Wm. Warren died at o'clock this murning. With only the possible exception of Joseph comedian of the age in which he lived. He was born in the house now numbered 712 Sansom street, Philadalphia on Nov. 17. 1812. His education as a boy was very thorough, and he early im-good reading and that love for the best books which made him such an accomplished scholar and titerateur. His father's purpose was that the boy should be trained to mercaptile pursuits. But in the latter years of the elder Warren's life he was unfortunate in his business ventures, and when bibed that taste for he passed away at Baltimore, Oct. 19, 1832, his family were left without a competency. Under such circumstances Warren, then scarcely twenty years of age. determined to follow, as his father had done before him, his natural bent, and seek fame and fortune following the sire's art. A benefit was given to his mother at the Arch Street Theatre Oct, 27 of this year, and on this occasion the young actor made his first bow on the stage. He enacted the part that his father had chosen for his debut fortyeight years before-young Norval in Howe's tragedy, "Douglas," His success was genume, and from that moment the setor had no doubt as to the wisdom of choosing his father's honored profession.

His career for several years was exceedingly varied, and in his time he pisyed all sorts of parts, from juvenile to low comedy. With a company organized by Joseph Jefferson, the elder, our actor journeyed through the West, acting in stores, log-houses, wherever a stage could be improvised or audience room arranged. Many were the privations endured on these long journeyings, and the very mention of the work that was done, and cheerfully, too, in those days would appal the dilettante young men who pose on the stage dilettante young men who pose on the stage to-day.

In 1845 the actor paid a visit to Europe, more for recreation than business. Once, however, he acted at a benefit entertainment at the Strand Theatre in London, his rôle being Con Gormily in the "Vermonter," an old farce by Logan. He returned to this country the year following, and now, for the first time, Boston claimed his talent.

The opening night at the Howard Athenseum, was Oct. 5, 1846, and among the company engaged for the season was William Warren. The actor made his entered on the Boston stage in Sheridan's comedy, "The Rivals," playing the part of Sir Lucius O'Trigger.

on the Boston Mage in Sterdam a collection.

'The Rivals," playing the part of Sir Lucius O'Trigger.

From the moment of his appearance on the stage Mr. Warren's success was assured. He appeared in twenty-five roles that season. The Boston Museum, which, though young in years, was already an institution in this Yankee capital, possessed in the year 1846, as it has every year since, a good stock company. But Charles W. Hunt, leading comedian for several seasons and exceedingly popular with the public, severed his connection with the house. No man but Warren could possibly take his place; no man but Warren could be engaged, and even the announcement that the tayorite comedian had been secured for the Museum did not at first satisfy the friends and admirers of Hunt.

Up to the time of his great benefit in 1882

of Hunt.

Up to the time of his great benefit in 1882
Mr. Warren played no less than 561 distinct character roles upon the Museum stage. He remained the rest of that season, and with those played at the Howard Athenseum his record reaches nearly six hundred in Boston alone. With the parts played in his wander-ings previous to his coming to Boston, he has in all appeared in some seven hundred roles.

During the twenty-second season at the Museum, that of 1864-65, Mr. Warren severed his connection with the company, and, under Henry C. Jarrett's management, as chief of the Warren-Orton combination, made a suc-cessful starring tour of the country, and in such roles as that of Dr. Paugloss in "The Heir-at-Law" and "Jeremiah Beetle," was especially acceptable.

Right royal was the greeting extended the comedian as he made his re-entree on the Museum stage in "The Heir-at-Law." Never was an actor more cordially welcomed never was friendship better exemplified. Speaking of his genius, one critic says, after referring to the other great comedians "Mr. Jefferson alone remains and it is a nearly impossible to compare him with Mr.

warren as to weigh a sonnet of Shakes, ear against a comedy of Goldsmith. The loftier genius of the creator of 'Rip Van Winkle must be conceded at once." Mr. Warner's steadfast adherence to the comparatively uneventful life of a stock actor in Boston with its moderate rewards both, of fortune and of renown was nctor in Boston with its moderate rewards both, of fortune and of renown was often mentioned as an interesting indication of the peculiar reserve and modesty of his nature, but its value to this city has not so often been the subject of comment. Our debt is, nevertheless, very great; his "residence" here has been "better every way." both in reputation and profit" for us, if not for himself.

To a man of his temperament the conditions have been favorable, for in this quiet corner, under the warm sun of steady, hoppular and critical favor, his powers developed freely, equally and naturally, suffering neither the violent chills nor the furious fervors of a wandering professional life, and uncramped by the harrow money-estching theories, which belittle the orbits of most of our "stars." The result of this has been that, in Mr. Warren, we had constantly before our eyes a true and therough artist, approaching ever nearer and nearer to ideal perfection. The worth of such a player to the dramatic taste of a city is incalculable, and to Mr. Warren's constant presence more than to any other cause we attribute the exceptionally active interest which all grades of society in Boston, and especially the more intellectual classes, have for a long time taken in the dramatic art.

Mr. Warren's style as a dramatic artist was so broad and full as to be exceedingly hard to describe. Devoid of eccentricities and extravagances, it lacked, like a perfectly proportioned building, those salient peculiarities which at once catch even the unobservant eye. Mr. Warren was a living proof of the high value to the player of a strong intelligence and superior cultivation. The plastic temperam nt, though two-thirds of an actor's equipment, is not all.

If it were, N. C. Goodwin, jr., who has an unsurpassed mimetic gift, would be the first of American comedians: and yet he is, and it is to be feared will always be simply a very comical player, at whom one laughs inordinately, and from whom one carries little away.

ordinately, and from whom one carries little away.

Mr. Warren's range as a comedian was simply unequalled, and to the interspection of every variety of character he brought that exquisite sensibility and clearness of insight, that nobility of nature and fulness of understanding which made his work vital, natural and satisfying. For pathos his gift was hardly less remarkable than for humor, the touch showing at times, perhaps, not his greatest facility, but the method being slways imaginative and the feeling pure and genuine.

Nor was it upon the deep and broad lines that Mr. Warren excelled. In the art of swift and subtle insinuation in the deplay of mixed or confing emotions he had no rival and subtle insignation in the display of mixed or confiing emotions he had no rival upon our sage.

Personally an eminently socials man, with the gallantry of a gentleman of that old school to which he belonged, Mr. Warren remained a bachelor. His immediate family included four sisters: Hester, born in 1816, whose first husband was a musician by the name of Willis, from whom she was separated, and who afterwards became the wife of Joseph Proctor. She died in Boston on the 7th of December. 1841, from a cold caught while performing in the "Naisd Queen," at the National Theatre, under the management of William Pelby: Anna, born in 1818, who married Danford Marblo, the famous Yankee comedian, in 1838, and died in Cincinnation March, 11, 1872; Emma, who had for her first husband a Mr. Price, and was subsequently married to D. Hanchet, who died in New York in May, 1879; Mary Ann, who married John B. Rice, an actor, who afterwards became Mayor of Chicago. Mrs. Rice is a widow, and is still living. THE ROBBERS ROBBED.

Adventures of Mr. Donnelly and His $500 When Terence F. Donnelly, of 419 Eas Sixty-ninth street, went to the People's Theatre last Saturday he wore a $500 diamond pin that had been loaned him by Photographer Winslow, of Grand and Forsyth streets. On his way home, when he tried to get off a Third avenue car at Houston street, he slipped and fell, and two polite strangers picked him up and conveyed him to Hultze's picked him up and conveyed him to Huitze's drug store, on the corner.

When the strangers had gone Mr. Donnelly missed the diamond pin. He left a good description of the men with Capt. Cassidy, and Detectives Mulliane, Reay and Connors last evening arrested Henry A. Scott and James. Edwards, ex-convicts, whom Mr. Donnelly and the orangist identified.

The detectives found trace of the pin in J. Silverstone's place at 318 Broome street. He identified Scott as the man who had pawned the pin and said Edwards was in his company. It turned out that the men celebrated the larceny by getting drunk, and were in turn robbed of the pawn-ticket by their pal, who appeared the following day at the pawn-broker's and claimed the pin.

At the Essex Market Court this morning the two prisoners were held for trial.

PILING COMPLAINTS ON BARRY.

New Charles Street Policeman Has

Hard Row to Hoe. John A. Rosenbaum, a butter and cheese merchant, of 310 Washington street; Henry Luhrs, his brother-in-law: Mrs. Ellis, Mrs, M. Hexter and William Jackson, all of whom reside on Waveriey place, appeared before Supt. Murray this morning to complain against Policeman Richard Barry, of the against Policeman Richard Barry, of the Charles street squad, for clubbing the men and using insulting and indecent language to the women on the night of Sept. 19.

Barry, according to Jackson's statement, advised the lad to talk back, so he could carry him to the station-house on a stretcher. Barry was in a towering rage, if not half drunk, and kept the neighborhood in an uproar for several hours.

Clerk Peterson was called in by the Superintendent and four seminate complaints were intendent and four separate complaints were taken against Barry, any one of which, if proven, will be sufficient to break him. He has been on the force only a month. HARRIET COFFIN AGAIN.

The Eccentric Young Woman Raises a Row at the Grand Central Depot.

Sergt. Schmittberger, of the West Thir tieth street police, was about to board the midnight train of the Harlem Railroad last night, when he saw a lady arguing earnestly with the ticket seller about a package which she had left in his charge, and which the ticket man flatly denied having received.

The lady was furiou-ly angry and repeatedly shouted that she had left the backage with the agent. Attracted by the high words, the Sergeant drew nearer, to discover in the female combatant the eccentric Harriet E. Coffin, who has so often posed before the public since her passion for Kyrle Bellew first brought her into prominence.

The Sergeant summoned a policeman, who told the taket-seller that the lady was Miss Coffin, and the argument was abruptly terminated by the closing of the window, and Miss Coffin left the station in high dudgeon, calling down blessings on the ticket-seller's head. with the ticket seller about a package which

BROOKLYN'S ELITE AGHAST.

LA GRANGE BROWN'S DREADFUL PICTURES HORRIFY THE HEIGHTS.

Over Seven Hundred Indecent Photographe Found in the Young Amateur's Studio-Many of Them Those of Fashionable Young Girls-Taken by the Flash Light-

The Artist's Cowardice in Court The aristocracy of ancient and respectable Brooklyn Heights is very much exercised just now over the arrest of La Grange Brown, an amateur photographer and full-fledged fool, who lives with his parents at 100 Hicks street. Along with the young operator of the camera Detective Rorke, of the Butler street police station, took into custody 239 negatives and 520 photographs. It is these negatives and photographs which are troubling the good people of the Heights, for they are the counterfeit presentment of women and young girls in the giddy garb of Nature, and it is whispered that some of the females who have had their charms focussed by young Brown are the daughters of highly respectable families.

Brown was remanded to jail by Police Justice Massey this morning to answer the charge of mislemeanor on two counts on charge of missemeanor on two counts on Sept. 28.

Tuesday last a gentleman visited Anthony Comstock at his office and informed him that while he was waiting for a "prescription" at the saloon of Valentine Schmitt, Fulton and High street, Brooklyn, the evening before, a young man had exhibited to a throng of people there obscene pictures of nude females.

Next evening Agent George E. Oram, of Mr. Comstock's society, was introduced to Next evening Agent George E. Oram, of Mr. Comstock's society, was introduced to the young man at this same saloon as a young married man of sporting proclivities who was "all right," and Oram purchased from him a dozen of the vilest specimens of ob-scene pictures from a hundred shown. The young man was Brown.

Last night, armed with a warrant for the arrest of Brown, Mr. Comstock, Agent Oran and Detective Borke again visited Schmittu's and found Brown there in a state of intoxication. He was told that his mother wanted him, and then two of his new friends assisted him home.

Mrs. Brown admitted the party. Borke and Oram half carried young Brown up stairs to his bed-room, and there the warrant and Orain hair carried young Brown up stairs to his bed-room, and there the warrant was read to him.

Mrs. Brown is a weak, feeble woman, and she fainted dead away at this, and the excitement sobered her son to some extent.

He has achieved quite a reputation as a photographer and as an amateur electrician, and when the officers demanded the key to his laboratory he told them that it was as much as their lives were worth to enter the room, as he had an electrical arrangement which would kill them.

Detective Rocke picked up the effeminate fellow and threatened to pitch hun through the door, and this had the effect of making Brown open the door himself. But inside the laboratory he managed to turn a current of electricity on so that Rocke received a slight shock in his left leg.

In the laboratory was found all the latent appliances for photography, together with the photograph and negatives already mentioned, and Brown was locked up at the

that they hid their faces with their hands or arms, and others turned their faces away from the camera.

When Brown was brought into court this morning he was crestfallen and frightened. He trembled like an aspen, and when his trial was set down for next Friday he asked: "In the meantime, may I go home?"

To this Justice Massey replied, with a disgusted, loathing look and tone: "In the mean time you will go to jail."

Brown is a snightly built man of mean time you will go to jail."

Brown is a snightly built man of meantime height. He is twenty-eight years old and an only son of Elder Harvey H. Brown, of the Sands Street Methodist Church. Mr. Brown is a clerk in the Brooklyn tax office, and until two years ago the son was a bookkepper in a New York house.

The family are highly respected and move in the best of Brooklyn society. In 1884 La Grange Brown was married to Miss Lizzie Bedford, daughter of Henry Bedford, and a most estimable young woman. One Lazzie Bedford, daughter of Henry Bedford, and a most estimable young woman. One child was born to them, but the young mother was obliged to leave her husband, and is now suing for a divorce.

Brown was much put out because he was obliged to appear in court in a soiled collar. He has light, thin hair, with a bald forehead, a small yellow mustache and side whiskers.

The evidence against Brown seems to be overwhelming. The charges are that he had obscene pictures in his posses. overwhelming. The charges are that he had obscene pictures in his possession, and that he sold such pictures. Each is a misdemeanor punishable with imprisonment for not more than a year in the penitentiary or a fine of $500 or less, or with both.

RESPITE FOR THE BRIDGE L'GHTS.

They Must Go, It Seems, But Uncle Sam's Zealors Will Walt a Few Days. Supt. Martin, of the Bridge, said to an EVENING WORLD reporter to-day regarding the removal of the Bridge lights :

Of course, we shall obey any order that may be served on us by the United States authorities, but to remove the lights would spoil one of the most beautiful sights of this city. "Still, I suppose it must be done. I do not know at present just how the lights are to be screened, but within a week or two some plan will have been adopted, I think."
